Message from the Guest Editors

Smart tourism is an innovative type of tourism as it provides smart technology applications for tourists' on-site experiences (i.e., AR, VR, MR, and intelligent guide systems); however, limited research exists on it.

Sustainable tourism requires us to understand the effects of all planning, development, and management on sustainability. This Special Issue aims to present a wide range of papers elucidating cutting-edge progress in sustainable smart tourism relevant to planning, development, management, and sustainability perspectives.

We welcome papers that develop state-of-the-art methods for assessing the cutting-edge progress in smart tourism, new frameworks for theoretical or practical implications, and approaches for monitoring economic, socio-cultural, or environmental perspectives with a view of smart tourism to promote sustainable tourism. This Special Issue will elucidate up-to-date, high-quality, international, multidisciplinary, and valuable insights to support smart tourism development, potentially contributing to the literature.
